Guided Reading is a teaching approach that is designed to help individual students learn how to process a variety of increasingly challenging texts with understanding and fluency. This type of teaching and learning is most effective when instruction is delivered in the smallest group possible to address the specific literacy needs of the students.

Guided Reading - ReadingResource.net

In the new literacy curriculum there are two 'dimensions' to reading; word reading and comprehension. I believe that guided reading should primarily be for the latter. Other reading strategies need to be implemented for word reading/decoding and it would be nigh on impossible to teach this for 1 session per week of 20 mins.
