Tahitian Red. The "HONDA" decal was red but outlined in white. The decal "TRAIL 110" appeared only on the left side cover. The ignition used points and condenser. The engine was a single cylinder displacing 105cc and used a single overhead cam (OHC).

Except for the engine change, the 1966 models of CT200 and CT90 were the same—the change in model number reflected a new Honda policy that model numbers would indicate engine-size class. The CT200 and 1966 CT90 had a dual rear sprocket, which created a lower gear range for heavy weight or steep terrain.
