If the Church Were Christian - Beliefnet

In the introduction of Philip Gulley's If the Church Were Christian, Gulley compares the church to the skeleton of a dinosaur from a museum. He says that, "all we have is extrapolation, a few bones upon which have been erected a larger organism" (3). This comparison stood out to me because I always thought that...

1 If the Church Were Christian(8) Philip Gulley. If the church were Christian, it would care less about sex and more about love. I hadn't been a pastor long when an elder in the meeting I was pastoring told me about an elderly couple living together who weren't married. He was very upset about their "living in sin" and asked me to speak to them and set them straight.
