This is a course in the lively history and practice of literary theory. Since literature came into the world people have had theories about it: what it is, what it can & shouldn't do, why it exists, how it works, what makes a piece of writing good or mediocre or sublime—and who gets to say so.

A Brief History of Literary Theory

This is a survey of the main trends in twentieth-century literary theory. Lectures will provide background for the readings and explicate them where appropriate, while attempting to develop a coherent overall context that incorporates philosophical and social perspectives on the recurrent questions: what is literature, how is it produced, how can it be understood, and what is its purpose?
